

June 2017 Newsletter

Dear Customer,

Thank you for being our customer. This newsletter will be sent occasionally to keep you informed on any developments concerning compost food safety, our efforts to comply or exceed all food safety requirements, and any ongoing events or conferences we may attend to keep our customers abreast of any changes in food safety law or rules concerning compost and soil amendments.

Also included may be any nutrient or beneficial aspects that might help your productivity or reduce your input costs.

This issue addresses food safety.

Probably the best endorsement for Comgro Soil Amendments is to have to go through a recall investigation. We have had more than one customer tell us that when it came to examining the compost applications, one quick look at the Comgro Soil Amendments reports given to each customer was virtually a “free pass” from the investigators for that part of the operation. Our goal is to make compost applications a seamless non-issue for food safety concerns by conforming to, or exceeding known rules and guidelines. In this way we can best serve our customers from having to justify their practices. By attending and participating in food safety seminars and regulatory conferences we are abreast of any changes that may occur.

Johnny just returned from the Center for Produce Safety Research Symposium in Denver and discovered that Comgro Soil Amendments was the only attendee in the compost business. No other compost companies sent a representative. Again, by contributing, or being abreast of the latest food safety concerns, we can protect our customers from any unwarranted accusations from the compost aspect of the business.

Continuing to serve our customers with the best and safest product, we appreciate your business.
